OUR RED CHAIR EXPERIENCE

Alejandra and Miriam

We felt very strange because we didn't know what to do.

We learned that other children from the other parts of the world can do lots of things. We enjoyed meeting other children and if we could do it again we would.

Richard

I loved this experience of doing the red chair project because it is important to realise that we are not the only people in the world and that others exist as well that need our help. This year the red chair project was a little different as one leg of the chair broke and I think we did well to repair the damage that was done to the chair. It was very fun collaborating with Lorenzo and I think we did a good job. At the beginning, because I did a similar thing last year in another school I had a terrible experience as I missed many playtimes but Lorenzo managed to convince me and I do not regret writing that persuasive letter early in the morning. If I had the opportunity to do it again I would bet €100 I would be the first to deliver the piece of paper. I am being honest saying that my favorite part was probably to have lots of fun and miss lessons. (luckily it was not p.e. lessons 🙏)

LORENZO

I really liked this experience. I think we should repeat it if we have the opportunity. This project has a very important value: we should realise that there are other people that are not as fortunate as us and that we need to do everything that we can to help them. I think it was very fun to collaborate with Richard and other people in the world to try to fix the broken leg and share some ideas of how we could help the people that are not as lucky as we are. I didn't regret writing the letter to be admitted to participate in the red chair project. I think we should do what we can to help people that are not as lucky as we are and to offer them the same opportunities that we had. There is a thing I want to underline: when we were talking sometime other kids in our school interrupted us and that really bothered me but I always think we should re-try it.

Noah and Eve

I enjoyed working with other grades and schools. I felt good because we've been through a lot with Covid this year so we could share.
